Strategies to Lead Through Challenging Times

The WELD Pittsburgh Chapter looks forward to connecting with you for our June Executive Women's Series event featuring Mary Beth Jenkins, Executive Vice President, UPMC, President, UPMC Insurance Services Division, President & CEO, UPMC Health Plan.

Challenging times don't ask us to be perfect. They ask us to be present, courageous, and clear. They ask us to lead with conviction and compassion. And they remind us that leadership is not about having all the answers—it's about creating the conditions where people can rise, even when the world feels heavy.

Women leaders have always navigated complexity. We've always led through the unexpected. And that's why we are uniquely prepared for this moment. Not to endure it—but to transform it.

Key Takeaways:

- Lead With Radical Clarity
- Make Decisions With Both Head and Heart
- Build a Culture of Adaptability, Not Perfection
- Strengthen Your Inner Circle
- Protect Your Energy Like a Strategic Asset

The True Cost of Healthcare: It's More Than Premiums

When employers evaluate their health benefits, the conversation almost always starts, and ends, with premiums. While those costs are highly visible, they represent only a portion of the true financial impact. The bigger, less obvious costs often go unmanaged.

Healthcare doesn't just affect your balance sheet; it directly influences how your workforce performs every day.

Absenteeism is the most recognizable factor. Employees dealing with unmanaged health conditions, delayed care, or financial barriers to treatment are more likely to miss work. But even more costly is presenteeism—when employees are physically present but not fully productive due to health issues, stress, or fatigue. This silent drain on performance often exceeds the cost of absenteeism yet rarely shows up in traditional reporting.

There's also the impact on retention. Benefits that feel expensive, confusing, or difficult to access can lead employees to seek opportunities elsewhere. In a competitive labor market, healthcare isn't just a cost, it's a key component of your value proposition as an employer.

And then there are downstream financial effects. Poorly managed plans can lead to higher utilization of emergency services, increased specialty drug spend, and delayed diagnoses that result in more complex and costly treatments over time.

The takeaway is simple: focusing solely on premiums provides an incomplete picture. A high-performing benefits strategy looks at total impact—cost, utilization, employee experience, and long-term outcomes.

Employers who take this broader view are better positioned to make informed decisions. By improving access to care, supporting employee engagement, and monitoring trends throughout the year, they don't just manage costs, they improve performance. Because in the end, the true cost of healthcare isn't just what you pay, it's what it prevents, what it enables, and how it shapes the health and productivity of your organization.

The African American Chamber of Commerce offers its members access to My Benefit Advisor as a solution for employee benefits, including voluntary offerings. For more information about My Benefit Advisor, visit our website at aacc.mybenefitadvisor.com or contact Craig Pritts at (800) 377-3539.

City Controller Rachael Heisler's office released the 2025 Annual Comprehensive Financial Report.

This report tells the story of the city's financial activities for 2025. The general fund spent $44 million more than it brought in. Revenues and expenses were stable. The big take away is the federal COVID relief dollars masked the core financial issue facing the city: spending is outpacing revenue. You can read the full report
